Question # 25
Can you tell me about a time when you had to prioritize personal matters over work?

Answer:-
The best answer would be that you have never had this happen and that your personal life does not interfere with your job. Realistically however, interviewers know that it has probably happened at least once if you have been working for many years. If you decide to give an example, choose an extreme personal matter like death of a family member that would be appropriate to prioritize over work.
Discussing sick children or any other family member you are currently responsible for the care of or discussing personal problems like spousal discord or other family drama.

Question # 26
Tell me how do you prioritize your time?

Answer:-
The customers always come first. As a Manager, I assign the highest priority to handling customer complaints and problems. When there are no unresolved or un-addressed customer concerns, home-office directives are carried out with diligence. The next priority is employee concerns. I believe happy employees provide the most value and courtesy to customers, and I take great care in choosing and keeping quality personnel. This also minimizes the amount of time I must take to correct problematic employee behavior or to micromanage. After employee relations, vendor relationships take priority.
